

Rural Addressing

Assigning Addresses and Posting Emergency Number Signs

Emergency Number Signs

As authorized by State Statute, Goodhue County has an ordinance that establishes a rural identification system and regulates emergency numbers. The purpose of the ordinance is to minimize loss of life and property by enabling and facilitating emergency responders in finding and accessing County sites in need of emergency assistance.

New Addresses

Goodhue County Emergency Management Division assigns new addresses in the unincorporated areas of the County. Property owners stake-out the location of the driveway and provide the information on a detailed site plan or survey. The location of the driveway is measured; the measurement is used to calculate the emergency number. Typically, this process follows approval of a County Building Permit for a new structure at a new site location.

Construction Project Inspections

In addition to the County Ordinance on Rural Addressing, Building Codes require approved numbers and addresses for all new buildings/structures. When there is a construction project approved by a County Building Permit, the construction inspections include verification of compliance with rules for addresses. At the First Inspection, a project must have adequate temporary addressing. At the Final Inspection, a project must be in conformance with all numbering and addressing requirements.
